Professional study policy
- Travelers encourages personal development by way of undertaking further study for professional qualifications relevant to your work. To be eligible for reimbursement, the education programme must be widely recognised in your field for preparing professionals to excel in their careers.
- Approval of applications for financial assistance is within Travelers’ sole discretion.
- Each year, Travelers reviews its salary cap for providing 100 percent study subsistence support.
- For all other employees and other qualifications, Travelers will pay for the full costs and will recoup 50 percent of the total from the employee by monthly deduction from salary over a defined period, usually three or six months. Travelers will support one further attempt in the event of an exam failure, but subsequent retakes (including updated course books) will be at the expense of the employee.
- The amount of study leave will depend upon the nature of your studies and must be approved by your line manager.
- A separate policy applies to actuarial studies. Details will be provided to you if applicable.
