

THE PHD PROJECTSM

NEWS

Conference Edition 2016

Mission:

To increase workplace diversity by increasing the diversity of Business school faculty who encourage, mentor, support and enhance the preparation of tomorrow's leaders.

Vision:

A significantly larger talent pipeline of African-Americans, Hispanic-Americans and Native Americans for business leadership positions.

Objectives:

- To inform and educate minorities about all aspects of a business doctoral program, and them to follow their dream of becoming a professor;
- To provide a nurturing support network for minorities as they navigate their doctoral programs;
- To increase the number of minority business professors who can function as role models and mentors;
- To influence more minorities to pursue business degrees/careers;
- To increase the number of qualified minority applicants to fill critical positions in the business disciplines;
- To improve the preparation of all students by allowing them to experience the richness of learning from a Faculty with diverse backgrounds; and
- To reach the goal of a better prepared and more diversified workforce to service a diversified customer base.

THE POWER OF NETWORKING

Becoming a business doctoral student can be a very isolated, lonely experience. And for minorities, this is even more so, simply because there just aren't a lot of others that look like you—in the classroom, or in front of it.

For minorities who enter a business doctoral program, The PhD Project formed the Minority Doctoral Students Associations as a means of combating the high attrition rate inherent among all business doctoral students. Through these professional peer associations (in accounting, finance, information systems, management and marketing) minority doctoral students make contact with others who are facing similar challenges on the way to becoming business school professors. Every minority business doctoral student in a full-time, AACSB-accredited program is a member of one of these associations. Each association has an annual conference held in conjunction with the relevant professional academic association.

“There is no book or website, or anything that tells you what getting a Ph.D is like. I came to the DSA as an incoming first year student and I left with an advantage. I got valuable information, and I met people I could contact during the year if I had a question.”
Stephanie Lawson, faculty at Winthrop University.

“Coming to the DSA and talking to someone in their first or second year is very different from talking to someone who did it ten years ago. It was good preparation for my first year: I feel like I won't be surprised.” – Rachel Martin, U Wisconsin – Madison

These associations have been incredibly successful in reducing the dropout rate for minority doctoral business students. The average dropout rate for doctoral students is 30-35%. For PhD Project participants, it is less than 10%.

“Academics who succeed have good social networks, mentors and role models,” says David Crockett, Associate Professor, University of South Carolina. “Minorities have access to less. But The PhD Project is creating these networks.”

Professor Gavin Clarkson, a member of the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma, is an associate professor at New Mexico State University. From 2003 until 2008, Dr. Clarkson was an assistant professor in the School of Information at the University of Michigan, with simultaneous appointments at the Law School and in Native American Studies. Professor Clarkson who received his Ph.D. in Information Systems from Harvard University credits The PhD Project with helping him obtain his faculty positions at the University of Michigan, noting that “one of the benefits of being part of The PhD Project is the opportunity to network at a much deeper level than is normally possible for doctoral students.”

Visibility in national, campus, and department events helps you to become better known by your advisor, committee, and other individuals in your field. Your ability to network with faculty will help when it comes to securing fellowships, assistantships, opportunities to work in a lab, and recommendations for the future.

So, don't be shy...get out there and network! And remember, The PhD Project is always here to help.

SUCCESS! Here's a look at all the current faculty members who attended a November Conference since our inception.

How Can I Help The PhD Project?

We hope you have found this conference to be both informative and valuable. Over the past few days, you've had the opportunity to network with many people that can help you on your path to a Ph.D.

Often, we are asked, "How can I help The PhD Project?" Well, there are several ways you can help us to continue our efforts to diversify corporate America.

- Refer a Sponsor. Do you know of a corporation that we can add to our list (see back page)? Corporate funding begins at $25,000.
- Refer a potential Ph.D. Candidate. Direct individuals to our website, www.phdproject.org, to apply for next year's annual conference. If they are already in a doctoral program, have them email myrnavarner@kpmg.com to become a member of one of our Doctoral Student Associations.
- Refer a Supply Alliance member organization. Close to 50 academic and professional associations have partnered with The PhD Project by sharing their membership database or providing a link to our website. And, more than 30,000 individuals have contacted us as a result. Are you a member of an association whose members may be likely PhD Project candidates?

If you are interested in lending support, please contact Marie Zara, Director of Advancement, directly at 201-307-8660, or mzara@kpmg.com. We thank you for your help.

INSPIRE, EDUCATE, TRANSFORM

Become a Professor and pursue your dream of life-long learning and mentoring.

PhD Project Professors Dr. Rebeca Perren, California State University at San Marcos; Dr. Marcus Bellamy, Boston University; Dr. Cinthia Satornino, Northeastern University
